1. Scope and definitions

1.1 In addition to the licence agreement entered into by the customer and the Publishing House C.H. BECK (hereinafter the "Publisher"), these General Terms and Conditions, as effective at the time of the order by the customer, shall apply to the relationship between the Publisher and the customer with regard to beck-online.DIE DATENBANK, beck-online STEUERN & BILANZEN, beck online WIRTSCHAFTSDATENBANK, beck-personal-portal and NomosOnline (each hereinafter the "Database"), as well with regard to E-Mail-Services. "E-Mail-Services" shall mean, in particular, beck-fachdienste and the E-Letters combined with publications such as, e.g., ArbR, FamFR, GRUR-Prax, GWR, SteuK, etc.

1.2 Any conflicting, deviating or supplementary general terms and conditions of the customer shall not apply, unless the Publisher expressly approves to their applicability. These General Terms and Conditions shall also apply if the Publisher unconditionally performs services despite knowledge of differing or contrary terms and conditions of the customer.

1.3 The terms as used in these General Terms and Conditions shall have the meaning as set out below:

1.3.1 “Retrieval” shall mean the display of a document within the browser upon a request made by the customer. If a document is displayed multiple times, e.g. caused by browsing the Database forward and backward, or by additional requests, each instance of display shall be counted as a separate retrieval.

1.3.2 “Authorized user” shall mean a natural person entitled to use the Database as permitted by the licence agreement. Unless stipulated otherwise in the license agreement, authorized users shall be such users only, who, at the time of conclusion of the license agreement, either are shareholders (partners, co-owners) in the customer entity, or who are employees of the customer. Any direct or indirect use of the Database by other persons is prohibited. Self-employed professionals sharing office with the customer shall not qualify as authorized users.

1.3.3 “Document” shall mean each page as displayed within the browser, irrespective if the content is to be paid for or free of charge, including but not limited to content which is in the public domain, as well as public domain content, abstracts, and indices, except hit lists, print previews, and help pages.

1.3.4 “Single Document” shall mean a document which is not included in the modules as subscribed by the customer and which can be retrieved within the services “retrieval of single documents” or “beck-treffer”.

1.3.5 “Retrieval of single documents” shall mean a special service allowing the retrieval of single documents which are not included in the modules as subscribed by the customer. The retrieval of single documents is subject to an additional charge.

1.3.6 “IP-Check” shall mean permanent access to the Database by use of a static IP-address as acquired by the customer. The access to the Database by way of IP-Check is subject to a separate agreement to be entered into by the parties.

1.3.7 “Customer” shall mean the contractual party as set out in the license agreement. A customer can be a natural person, a legal entity or any other entity or organisation as identified in the license agreement.

1.3.8 “Session” shall mean the time period starting with the log-in to the Database and ending with the log-out or the deactivation of the browser.

1.3.9 “Single sign-on” (SSO) shall mean a procedure by which signing-in by an authorized user to his device automatically includes the personal log-in to the Database.

1.3.10 “Affiliated enterprises” of the customer shall mean enterprises which are legally affiliated with the customer at the time of conclusion of the license agreement.

2. Conclusion of contracts

2.1 Any display or presentation of a Database and/or an E-Mail-Service on a website or in other media featured by the Publisher shall not constitute a binding offer by the Publisher.

Rather, the customer is given the option to submit a binding offer for the conclusion of a licence agreement.

2.2 For user subscriptions for up to nine (9) users, customer may place an online order. In such case, the customer may submit an offer by clicking the button “order against payment” after completing the online order process. After submission of the offer, customer will be sent an order confirmation by E-Mail to the E-Mail address as indicated in the order. The order confirmation constitutes the acceptance of the offer made by customer by the Publisher. In this case, the license agreement consists of the order confirmation corresponding to the order as placed by customer and supplemented by these General Terms and Conditions.

2.3 For multi-user subscriptions for ten (10) or more users, customer may place an individual order request with the Publisher’s sales department. Customer thereupon will be sent a licence agreement to be signed by customer and returned to Publisher. The licence agreement shall become effective upon receipt of signed copy by the Publisher. The license agreement shall be supplemented by these General Terms and Conditions.

2.4 NJW subscribers shall have online access via beck-online to the content of NJWDirekt at no additional cost, subject to the scope of their subscription. For access, the activation of an individual activation code on the Publisher’s website is required.

2.5 Section 2.4 above shall apply mutatis mutandis to other print publications which may be subscribed in combination with a direct-module, as well as to E-Letters combined with Specialist Publications (Beraterzeitschriften).

3. Free trial period and right of termination

3.1 Upon conclusion of the license agreement, customer shall have the right to test the modules of the Database as subscribed by customer, as well as the beck-fachdienste, in full scope and free of charge for a free trial period. Unless agreed otherwise, the free trial period shall be four weeks. No free trial is granted for content which is not included in the subscribed product. The free trial will be granted only once per year; the Publisher may grant exceptions therefrom in individual cases.

3.2 In case customer decides against further subscribing the modules or beck-fachdienste, customer has the right to terminate the license agreement at any time during the trial period. The license agreement will then end upon the receipt of the termination notice by the Publisher.

3.3 (cancelled)

3.4 Subscriptions to the service “beck-treffer” do not provide for a free trial period and can be terminated by customer at any given time.

3.5 The right of withdrawal for consumers as set out in Section 4 below shall remain unaffected.

4. Duty information for consumers

4.1 The Publisher grants a right of withdrawal to customers who act in the capacity of a consumer in accordance with the instructions on the right of withdrawal below.

A “consumer” is a natural person who concludes the agreement for a purpose which cannot be attributed to a commercial or self-employed activity (§ 13 German Civil Code).

4.2 As an online business we are obliged to inform you as a customer about the Online Dispute Resolution platform (ODR platform) of the European Commission. This ODR platform can be reached via the following link: <https://webgate.ec.europa.eu/odr>. However, we do not participate in dispute resolution proceedings before a consumer arbitration board.

5. Access to the Database; Subscription of E-Mail-Services

5.1 Customer's access to the modules subscribed by customer is password-protected, and customer shall use the access data as assigned to him by the Publisher. In cases of multi-user subscriptions, each authorised user will be assigned an individual password and individual access data. For technical reasons, the individual access data for a personal log-in will be sent exclusively by E-Mail containing an encrypted link. For this reason, the customer is obligated to convey to the Publisher the respective E-Mail-addresses of all authorized users. The customer shall keep all access data and passwords confidential and shall prevent any unauthorised use by third parties; the customer shall also ensure compliance of all users with this confidentiality obligation. As a general rule, log-in via single sign-on (SSO) is permitted.

5.2 The usability and the functionality of the Database, as well as the monitoring designed to prevent unauthorized use, require that the devices used by the customer accept cookies as placed by the Publisher's systems, and that such cookies may not be modified during a session. The customer shall secure compliance with such requirements (in particular by respective settings in his browser). If customer is in breach of the above obligations for reasons he is responsible for, the Publisher shall not be liable for any malfunctions resulting therefrom. If the monitoring designed to prevent unauthorized use is impaired due to such a breach, the Publisher may request the customer to remedy such breach by setting a reasonable deadline. If customer does not timely remedy the breach, the Publisher has the right to suspend the customer's access to the Database until such breach has been remedied. Furthermore, the Publisher has the right to terminate the license agreement after setting an additional reasonable deadline and customer is still in breach after expiration of such additional deadline.

5.3 Courts, law firms, enterprises, public authorities and other institutions and organisations, which have a static IP-address, may access the Database via IP-Check subject to an individual agreement with the Publisher. In such case, the users will not be obliged to register with their user name and password, as their devices will be permanently connected to the Database.

The use of the personalised functions of the Database, in particular, the management of electronic files and the logging of searches, comments and mark-ups, require a personal user log-in with user name and password. At customer's request, an IP-Check may be set up such that individual customer accounts will be assigned their own access data and passwords.

The customer shall have the obligation to limit access to the Database via IP-Check to the network of his entity as well as to users authorised under the customer's subscription.

5.4 The Publisher reserves the right to deny access to the Database if there is evidence that the customer and/or the users are using technology which is affecting the functionality or security of the Database and/or is restricting Publisher's ability to verify customer's and/or user's access rights, and/or is restricting Publisher's ability to assess compliance with the scope of the subscription, or Publisher's ability to prevent unauthorized use. In particular, the Publisher may deny access, if the Database is being accessed from an IP-address listed in a publicly available blacklist or if the customer/user is using browser software enabling the user to remain anonymous or preventing the Publisher from monitoring the usage of the Database (e.g. Tor-Browser). Prior to blocking customer's access to the Database, the Publisher will inform the customer of the intended blocking and grant customer a reasonable period of time to correct the problem; this shall not apply in exigent circumstances.

5.5 The customer shall promptly inform the Publisher if the customer becomes aware of any misuse of access data or passwords, or of the access via IP-Check. In the case of a misuse, the Publisher has the right to suspend the access to the Database until the facts and circumstances have been cleared up and the misuse has been ended. Customer shall be liable for any misuse for which the customer is responsible.

5.6 In the case of the subscription of an E-Mail-Service, the customer will receive the technical information by E-Mail. Customer shall notify the Publisher of the relevant E-Mail-addresses.

6. Customer's duties of cooperation

6.1 Customer shall be responsible for providing and maintaining all technical equipment necessary for accessing the Database, in particular, hardware, operating system, Internet connection and current browser software. The Publisher will specify on the website which browsers are supported and will update such information from time to time.

6.2 In the case of innovations and modifications to the database system, the Publisher will provide the appropriate information. Customer shall then be responsible for making the necessary adjustments to his IT infrastructure.

6.3 The proper usability of the Database requires that the time and time zone are set correctly in the systems used by the customer. Customer shall be responsible for the relevant technical settings.

6.4 Customer shall take the necessary steps to secure its systems and the customer shall, in particular, use the established security settings of the browser and up-to-date protective mechanisms to prevent malware.

6.5 The retrieval of data relating to credit-worthiness within the use of beck-online WIRTSCHAFTSDATENBANK requires the customer to credibly establish a justified interest in obtaining the information and that there is no reason to assume that the data subject has a legitimate interest in his data being excluded from transfer (Sec. 29 para. 2 Federal Data Protection Act). The customer shall truthfully state his justified interest when requesting personal data. The user shall document and record the reasons for the existence of a justified interest as well as the respective evidence as per each request and retain such recordings for a period of twelve months in accordance with Sec. 29 para. 2 sentence 4 of the Federal Data Protection Act. The Publisher is obligated by law to take and inspect random samples of such recordings.

7. Scope of services; Availability; Right to make modifications

7.1 The modules of the Database accessible to customer within the scope of customer's subscription, and/or the content provided to the customer within the scope of subscribed E-Mail-Services, are set out in the licence agreement.

7.2 Any statements made by the Publisher with regard to the Database or the E-Mail Services in advertising materials, on websites, as well as in the documentation, shall be a description of the product only, and shall not constitute a guarantee or a guarantee of a characteristic feature.

7.3 The Publisher will use the standard of care as customary in the publishing industry in selecting and maintaining the content accumulated in the Database and the E-Mail-Services. The Publisher will continuously update the content with regard to court decisions and legislation, however the Publisher will have to rely on the accuracy of information provided by third parties. Author's works (including but not limited to commentaries, manuals, encyclopaedias and form books) will be added to the Database in their most current edition from time to time. Beck online commentaries (= Beck'sche Onlinekommentare) will be updated continuously; the date of the then current edition will be stated on the relevant page. The same applies to update notes pertaining to printed publications which may be published online from time to time prior to the release of a new edition in print. Customer is advised to conduct a plausibility check for all content before using it in a particular context.

7.4 The Publisher will use reasonable efforts to achieve an average availability of the Database of 98% per calendar year. Metering point for determining the availability of the Database shall be the interface between the database system and the Internet. The availability shall be determined in accordance with the following formula: $\text{Availability} = (\text{total time less total downtime}) / \text{total time} * 100\%$.

In determining the total downtime, the following times will not be considered:

- a) downtime caused by malfunctions of the Internet or other circumstances for which the Publisher is not responsible, in particular, force majeure;
- b) downtime caused by scheduled maintenance work in the database systems, which is regularly carried out daily between 6.00 and 8.00 a.m.;
- c) downtime caused by mandatory unscheduled maintenance work required to remove malfunctions; if possible, customer will be notified of any malfunction by a note on the website;
- d) downtime caused by temporary deficiencies in customer's technical infrastructure, such as malfunctions of the customer's hardware.

7.5 The Publisher will use reasonable efforts to continuously adjust the Database to changing requirements from time to time. Therefore, the Publisher reserves the right to adjust the system according to the technological state of art and to make improvements to the system, in particular to improve user-friendliness. The Publisher reserves the right to modify the content, provided such modifications are necessary for error correction, for updating and for supplementation, and/or are necessary due to optimised programming technologies, and/or are required due to licensing restrictions. If any such changes result in a material loss in value of the services subscribed by customer, then customer may either demand a reduction of the remuneration in proportion to the loss of value or terminate the licence agreement without notice. The right of termination may be exercised within eight weeks from the occurrence of the change.

8. Remuneration; Adjustment of remuneration; Payment terms

8.1 The remuneration payable by customer for subscriptions to use the Database or for subscription of E-Mail-Services is set out in the licence agreement.

8.2 The remuneration for subscriptions – also of Email-Services - shall be paid in advance for the subscription period and the subsequent extensions respectively. The length of the subscription period and subsequent extensions is set out in the licence agreement. The remuneration for the subscription of E-Letters purchased in connection with the subscription of a printed journal is included in the remuneration for the subscription of the respective journal for a period of one year.

8.3 For the retrieval of single documents from the Database which are not included in the modules subscribed by the customer, as well as for the retrieval of single documents as part of the service beck-treffer, remuneration is charged per single document in accordance with the then current price list as of the time of retrieval; this applies also to subscriptions during the trial period. The price for the respective individual document will be displayed to the customer before the retrieval of such document. The remuneration for the retrieval of single documents will be charged monthly in arrears. If the customer is in default of paying more than two consecutive invoices, the Publisher has the right to suspend the customer's access to the service retrieval of single documents. In this case, a customer who has only subscribed to the service "beck-treffer" may only retrieve documents which are generally available free-of charge.

8.4 Unless a price is expressly referred to as a gross price, all prices are net prices and statutory VAT at its then current rate will be added and shall be paid by customer.

8.5 Invoices by the Publisher are due for payment upon their receipt by customer without any deductions. Payments can be made by bank transfer, credit card (Master, Visa, Amex, JCB), or by direct debit.

8.6 If additional contents are added to a subscribed module or a beck-fachdienst, the Publisher may increase the remuneration in proportion to the addition. Insignificant additions shall not be considered. The increase of the remuneration will take effect for the first time for the extension following the addition (see Section 8.2 above). The reasons for the increase will be given in a letter added to the regular invoice. In the event of an increase, the customer has the right to terminate the licence agreement for the respective module, or for the respective beck-fachdienst in accordance with Section 13.8 below (extraordinary termination right).

8.7 Notwithstanding the provisions of Section 8.6 above, the Publisher may increase the remuneration for subscriptions by giving three months' written notice to the end of a month to the extent that either the costs incurred by the Publisher in order to perform the services, including but not limited to, the necessary costs of maintaining and developing the technical infrastructure, or the costs required for the licensing of third-party content, or the costs for customer service and general administration (while also considering any cost savings achieved), have increased as a whole, or to the extent that the market prices for the printed works included in the modules have increased after conclusion of the license agreement. In the event of an increase, the customer has the right to terminate the licence agreement for the respective module, or for the respective beck-fachdienst in accordance with Section 13.8 below (extraordinary termination right).

9. Property rights

9.1 Customer acknowledges that the Database is a database created by the Publisher, or a database within the meaning of Sec. 4, para. 2, and Sec. 87a, para. 1 German Copyright Act (UrhG). Any related computer programs are protected by Sec. 69a et seq. UrhG, whereas manuals and documentations are protected under Sec. 2 UrhG. Any third-party rights to the protected works shall remain unaffected.

9.2 All content published in the E-Mail Services is copyrighted. This applies also to the published court decisions and their guiding principles to the extent that they were edited, or revised, by a third party or by editorial staff.

9.3 Trademarks, company logos, other marks or protective notes, notices of authorship, serial numbers or other identifying features may not be removed or modified in electronic formats or printouts.

10. Customer's rights of use

10.1 Subject to the payment of the remuneration, the customer will be granted, in accordance with the provisions of the licence agreement and the provisions below, a non-exclusive, non-transferable right, limited to the term of the licence agreement, to use the subscribed modules of the Database, or to use the single documents retrieved or the contents of the purchased E-Mail Services, for customer and for the contractually defined authorised users for customer's own purposes.

10.2 The right of use includes the right to conduct searches in the Database, to retrieve documents and the right to read-only access, to download and save one copy of a document on the device of the customer or on the device of the authorised user, and to print out one hard-copy of the document. Within the scope of his professional practice (in particular legal advice, tax advice, accounting, governmental or judicial functions), the Customer has the right to make additional copies of documents or the contents of an E-Mail-Service and provide such copies in whole or in part to third parties in as far as forwarding such copies is related to the work on particular case. Any other reproduction or other utilisation of documents and/or hit lists require the prior written consent by the Publisher. The systematic and automated retrieval of documents and/or hit lists, the preparation of systematic compilations from retrieved documents and/or hit lists, as well as the systematic transmission of documents and/or hit lists, or the systematic making available of documents and/or hit lists, to third parties as well as the use of the Database for the purposes of a commercial information brokerage (research and retrieval of documents by order of third parties) is not permitted.

10.3 Downloaded documents and/or hit lists may only be stored for the term of the subscription and must be deleted thereafter; the Publisher hereby waives the right to have the copies returned. The permanent archiving of downloaded documents and/or hit lists is not permitted. Excepted therefrom is the case-related, process-related or file-related archiving to a minor extent. For archiving purposes, the customer may print, or permanently store on data storage media, up to 50 documents per case, process or file.

10.4 If the customer subscribes to the retrieval of single documents from the Database in accordance with the licence agreement, the customer may retrieve a second copy of the document during a period of 15 calendar days from the retrieval of the first copy without additional cost. In beck-online WIRTSCHAFTSDATENBANK and in the Schwacke-modules, the subscription to the retrieval of single documents is restricted to the one single retrieval.

10.5 The use of the Database is limited to the number of authorised users as stipulated in the licence agreement. Unless an access via IP-Check is agreed, the customer must identify all users by name. The users' right to access the service will be confirmed by the Publisher in writing or by E-Mail.

10.6 The use is limited to the retrieval of a maximum of 200 different documents per authorised user and calendar day. The Publisher has the right to charge an additional remuneration for the retrieval of additional documents; the then current price for the retrieval of single documents shall apply. The Publisher further reserves the right to reduce the access, retrieval and download speed for the respective user and device used by such user for the rest of the calendar day if the aforementioned volume is exceeded.

10.7 By using his access data and password, an authorized user can be logged-in to the Database only once at a given time. Upon an additional log-in by using a different browser or a different device, the preceding session will be terminated automatically.

10.8 Any statutory rights of use which may be exercised under statutory licences, e.g. in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 60a et seq. German Copyright Act (UrhG), are not included in or granted under the licence agreement and/or these General Terms and Conditions and shall remain unaffected. The Publisher does not participate in the RightsDirect program of the VG Wort.

10.9 The Publisher has the right to take technical measures to prevent a use in excess of the permitted scope and may, in particular, install relevant access restrictions. The customer may not use any devices, products or other means which serve the purpose of bypassing, or overcoming, the technical measures taken by the Publisher. In particular, the customer may not use any web-crawler or spider-programs, meta search engines or comparable technologies which automatically retrieve contents from the Database. In the event of a misuse, the Publisher may immediately suspend the access to the Database. Any other rights and remedies of the Publisher, including but not limited to, the right to terminate for good cause and claims for damages, shall remain unaffected.

10.10 Customer shall instruct the authorised users about the provisions above and shall ensure compliance by all users.

10.11 In case there is plausible evidence for misuse of the Database, in particular for an overuse, the Publisher has the right to request the customer to provide relevant information about the extent and manner of use of the Database. Further rights and claims of the Publisher shall remain unaffected.

10.12 If the customer is an entrepreneur, a corporate body under public law, or a special fund under public law and the customer does not comply with his obligations under Section 10.11 above for reasons the customer is responsible for, the Publisher has the right to in good faith assess and claim the revenues which were presumably lost; Sections 315 et seq. German Civil Code shall apply. The assessment may be based on criteria such as the number of retrievals recorded in the then current extension as compared to the retrievals recorded in the previous subscription period or extensions and the number of professionals employed or associated with the customer. Professionals shall mean all fully qualified individuals as well as all individuals in training (e.g. interns and trainee lawyers), provided such individuals are given access to the Database and are using the Database on behalf of the customer.

11. Claims in the event of defects

11.1 The Publisher shall repair any defects of the database system within a reasonable period of time. In that respect, the responsibility of the Publisher extends only to the network access point between Publisher's systems and the Internet, but not to the customer's systems and data transmission lines beyond that point.

11.2 The Publisher will use the standard of care as customary in the publishing industry in selecting and updating the content. The completeness, accuracy and currentness of the content cannot, however, be warranted.

11.3 The customer shall notify the Publisher of any defects, malfunctions or damage without undue delay.

12. Liability for damages

12.1 Irrespective of the legal grounds of any claims, the liability of the Publisher shall be limited within the framework of applicable statutory law as set out in Sections 12.2 to 12.6 below.

12.2 The Publisher shall be liable without limitation for any damage to life, body or health as well as for any damage caused by intent or gross negligence on the part of the Publisher or any of its legal representatives or agents, as well as for any damage resulting from the non-compliance with a guarantee or guaranteed characteristics given by the Publisher, or on account of maliciously concealed defects.

12.3 For damages incurred as a result of a slightly negligent breach of material contractual obligations by the Publisher or any of its legal representatives or agents, the Publisher shall be liable only limited to the damage which is foreseeable and typical for the contract. Material contractual obligations are obligations whose fulfilment is essential for the achievement of the purpose of the agreement and on whose fulfilment can be normally relied on by the customer.

12.4 The liability of the Publisher for other cases of slightly negligent conduct is limited to an amount of EUR 25,000 per individual damage.

12.5 The non-fault liability of the Publisher for defects existing at the time of conclusion of the contract according to Sec. 536a, para. 1 sentence 1 German Civil Code is hereby excluded.

12.6 Any given liability under the German Product Liability Act shall remain unaffected.

13. Commencement, term and termination of contracts

13.1 Unless agreed otherwise in the licence agreement, the provisions of this Section 13 apply to the commencement, term and termination of licence agreements.

13.2 A contract for the use of the Database, or the use of beck-fachdienste, will be concluded in accordance with the provisions of Section 2 above.

13.3 After the conclusion of the contract, a trial period will begin. Unless agreed otherwise, the term of the trial period is four weeks. The trial period is available only once a year. The Publisher may grant exemptions in individual cases. The customer may terminate the contract during the trial period at any time without notice and without a specific form. If no notice of termination is given, the contract will be valid for the subscription period, calculated from the end of the trial period.

13.5 A contract may be terminated by either party at four weeks' notice to the end of the then current subscription period or extension. In the absence of a termination, the contract is subject to an automatic extension in each case.

13.6 Contracts for the use of beck-treffer do not provide for a trial period and may be terminated at any time without notice.

13.7 In relation to the purchase of eLetters within the scope of the subscription of a journal, the commencement, term and termination of the subscription are stipulated in the relevant subscription agreement.

13.8 The Publisher will notify the customer in written form or in text form of an increase in price in accordance with Sections 8.6 and 8.7 above and about the customer's right of extraordinary termination as well as about the consequences of not giving notice of termination in time. The customer has the right to terminate the contract by giving notice within four weeks after receipt of the notification of the increase, the termination taking effect at the date at which the increase of price would have become effective. Should the customer not exercise his right of termination in time, the contract will be continued with the increased prices taking effect.

13.9 The above provisions do not apply to contracts concluded with users of Beck CD and DVD products and of printed works (such as e.g., NJW, JuS, Formularbuch Recht und Steuern) who use the access to the Database included therein, as well as with parties who use a free access to the Database on other grounds (e.g., authors).

13.10 Each party's right to terminate for good cause remains unaffected.

13.11 Upon termination of the contract, the Publisher may immediately suspend the customer's access to the Database, and/or discontinue the Email Services.

13.12 The right of withdrawal as set out in Section 4 of these General Terms and Conditions shall remain unaffected.

14. Management of Personal Data by Processing on Behalf

14.1 The customer is advised that the publisher will collect, process and utilize personal stock and user data in accordance with the publisher's data privacy statement details of which are set out in

<https://beck-online.beck.de/Service/Datenschutzerklärung>.

The customer is regarded as "controller" and the publisher is regarded as "processor" as defined in Article 28 of the EU General Data Protection Regulation (EU-GDPR) if a minimum of one of the individual groups as listed below is affected:

- a) Clients or other individuals involved in proceedings or litigation or other individuals where their personal data is managed through an online calculation program (such as iFam or iErb),
- b) Clients or other individuals involved in proceedings or litigation or other individuals where their personal data is managed through the file administration of the Database,
- c) User within the client's organisation, where the publisher generates statistic information on their user profile to facilitate the execution or the preparation of user agreements,
- d) User within the client's organisation where their log-in procedure is executed either via log-in dialogue or via Single Sign-on (SSO).

14.2 The publisher is authorized to process personal data only to the extent as required to ensure compliance with contractual obligations. Processing of personal data for other purposes shall not be permitted.

14.3 The publisher will ensure that all individuals entrusted with processing personal data will be subject to a commitment to safeguard secrecy of data and compliance with data protection laws. The customer undertakes to keep confidential all data obtained from the publisher's domain in conjunction with the execution of contractual obligations.
